MIGHLY IMPROPER.

By proper authority or otherwise informa tion is sent out that whatever objections, if any, had been entertained by President Cieveland to the active participation of government officials in the pending campaign, have been overcome, removed and set aside, and there will be an unrestrained outpouring of such aid and assistance in the different States. It is even said that Mr. Cleveland has facitly given his consent to the appearance of high government officials in New York to give to and Flower as candidates is about $38,000. Mr. Hill all the help they can.

Whether all of this be true, or any part of tt. or none of it, is immaterial. The utter im- Cleveland train from Gray Gables and secure propriety of any paid officer of the government forsaking his regular duties and engaging in electionsering, must be apparent to gay one that will give the matter a moment's consideration. An official of the government, whether the Secretary of the Treasury or the o'-war. humblest watchman in any of the departments, who draws a stated salary for the performance of certain duties, has no more right to abandon those duties, and yet be paid for the services supposed to be rendered, than he has to take any money that is not his own, crusade on Wall street, One proceeding is as dishonest as the other,

It is not necessary to quote the civil service law in support of this position, for that law is but the formal expression of the underlying principles of honesty and decency carried into the administration of public affairs. No stated reason can be adduced why the business of the government should not be carried for tober 17, addressed to Mrs. A. B. Conkling, ward on the same safe and conservative lines | wife of Dr. Conkling, who was abducted on laid down by any business man in the con- September 2, has been received at Cassopolis, not permit any of his employes to go off on some expedition entirely foreign to their puid occupation and spend their time and his money for some other person's benefit,

The contention made by some persons of a strubismal turn of mind that not to permit this political junketing of Government officials is an interference with the rights of American citizenship and the privileges of manhood is sheer nonsense, Citizenship and manhood have nothing to do with it. If the latter comes at all into question it is to emphasize the circumstance that the manifest manhood consists in being hopest and doing one's duty, The government official who draws his pay while he goes off on an electioneering tour is neither the one nor does the other.

SOME BURGLAR CONSIDERATIONS.

The burgiar is, they say, a migratory bird. and belongs to the class that does its traveling in the night time, the most ancient nutherity for this classification of this genus being the Scriptural text which speaks of the thief that cometh in the night. It will be observed that twenty centuries ago a thick that came in the night was not called a burglar because law was not then as perfect a nystem of words and loopholes as it is in these days; and to the Sanhedrim or Pontius Plinte or Herod, or Agrippa on any other Jew or Gentile who lost a watch, diamond a neckince, or any other valuable out of his chamber, it made no practical difference whether the larveny occurred in the day time or the night time.

But this is not to the point. Scientific folks inform us, and we adopt their demonstrations for the want of something better, that the nebular theory will account for certain strange things we see in the material world, and that the wave theory will explain certain uncertain psychological anomalies. They are here in Washington, at any rate-these migra tory birds, or burgiars, and it really makes no difference whether they come to town on the wings of the reclogist or the moral obliquity wave of the psychologist.

The fact of their numerous presence is evidenced by the almost infinite series of stories about these prowlers which appear from day to day in the newspapers, and which may always be written with the stereotyped appendix: "To be continued in our next."

It is claimed, also by the scientists, that there are remedies for all diseases and evilsa slightly optimistic view, but one quite in keeping with many of the best theories in speculative philosophy. If the wave theory as to crocks, burglars, and suicides be true there is something wrong, impotent, radically insufficient in the Weather Bureau or the Signal Service. They need another drawer in that bureau. The unheralded approach of a tephyr or the soft breathing of the wind from he mud flats of the Potomac might be con-Joned, but that a tidal wave of burglars and the consequent ebb of silver spoons and other forget-me-nots should occur without a signal flag is quite enough to suggest that the service is not so signal after all. In fact, it of his life the other day to a phonograph cylcan easily be proved by the inchrymose statements of many people in this city that the Historical Society.

ever for the absent sliver service.

Now us to the migratory theory there is not much sense in it and much less remedy. It does not interest the burgiarized unfortunata whether his wife's watch or baby's pap spoon now belong to one of a gang or a gang of one. No. There is only one remedy. The police, perhaps, want to know what to do with themthese birds or burgiars. We want to know how to do without them.

The only true anti-crook, burglar-proof, copper-fastened remedy we know against the midnight marander is to lock your door from the inside, bar the windows from the inside, and go to bed quietly.

THE SMALLPOX CASES.

While THE TIMES as a matter of duty inends always to give the public the full news oneerning cases of contagious diseases in this city, yet it will be seen from the news accounts thereon that there is no cause for general alarm.

The physician who first discovered the malady made an immediate report to the effi-cient District health officer, and Dr. Woodward and his assistants are always able to ope with cases when they have the good start that an early notification affords them, The public may be assured that THE TIMES will exercise special care to report the affair exactly as it is, giving it no undue prominence and, on the other hand, not indulging in any of the dangerous conservatism that fears to Dumas' six-act play of "The Corsician Brothers," with Robert Mantell in the dual role of Fabian and Louis det Francht, was the bill last night at Albaugh's. This drama is a favorite one with the public and one of Mr. Mantell's best. The interest of the plot hinges, upon the psychological chain of sympathy which, connecting the separated twin brothers, renders every important circumstance in the experience of one manifest to the consciousness of the other, Rapid change of part is necessitated by this, and it is most skillfully accomplished by Mr. Mantell, particularly in act 2. The duel in the fourth act is a realistic place of work, far more cloverly done than the average pussage of arms on the stage. Mr. Mantell's supporting company done acceptable work, though little opportunity is given for a fair estimate of their ability. Two calls before the curtain were given Mr. Mantell.

Miss Rehan, as Katharine, in the "Taming of the Shrew," was, as she always is, incom-parable in her rendition of the part at the New National Theater last night. She was a veritable tempest of wrath, and in her rage held her andience as firmly as by the winning sweetness of smile and manner that glorified the face of the conquered Katharine in the last act. Her splendid figure, revealed rather than hidden by her superb costumes, her face, intense with every emotion of her part, and her powers of tragedy all combined to make last night's presentment one of the triumphs of her career.

The rest of the company gave her strong support. Mr. Clarke as Petruchio matched Katharine as Petruchio should, and Miss Sibyl Carlisle was a very sweet and winsome Bianca. Mr. Silling corroborated this statement. It appears that the woman whom Mrs, Silling and a friend followed in the belief that it
